about Sri Aurobindo

introduction why "infinity in a drop"?

what is "Indian Psychology?"

about this map[1]

what is?

who am I?

what is consciousness?

what is the purpose?

what is right action?

who is the other?

how do I know?

what is yoga?

how to heal?

how to grow?

how to learn?

sachchidananda[1]

the evolution of consciousness

the Mother

Maya

purusha, prakriti, shiva & shakti

Samkhya, Tantra, Vedanta

integrality

rebirth

death

Nachiketas

ego, self and soul

consciousness vs. mind

pure consciousness

consciousness as force

3 concepts of consciousness

samskaras

gunas

karma

what determines character?

svadharma

svabhava

yugas

the evolving society

other worlds

4 theories of existence

a blade of grass[2]

the self as centre of consciousness

ordinary consciousness

planes of consciousness

two students

varnas

ashramas

roles

progressive emancipation

the self as agent

rasa

the self as enjoyer

two birds

self at different levels

sleep and dream

self and society

group identities

relationships

rigorous subjectivity

paradigms

types of knowledge & schools of psychology

witness consciousness

silencing mind

sources of error

cakras

concentration

intuition inspiration revelation

borders of the self

self and other

work

asatoma...

the self as knower

4 types of knowledge

naive & expert knowing

4 knowledge realms

a simple map of self and nature

an integral map of self and nature

time

the guru

effort

the veda within

churning the ocean

why pain?

things to avoid

the four aids

the vedic sacrifice

helping others

the evolving self

ego: hero or villain

after liberation, transformation

karma, jnana, bhakti yoga

faith

will

education for the soul

problems with schooling

the pragmatics of free progress

why mindfulness works

standing back

remember and offer

how can we change?

the other as mirror: beyond irritation viveka: from where do our impulses come?

cultivating virtues

equality

aspiration & Grace

effort & surrender

aspiration

rejection

surrender

philosophy
basic princples

theoretical psychology:
maps, concepts, processes

applied psychology:
self-development, therapy, education

category, core question

short note with links

Sri Aurobindo, the Mother

longish essay, chapter

short text

graphic

story

video